Recurring payments

Recurrent payments are used when periodic debit of funds from the customer's bank card to the account of the merchant (service provider) is required. This is a different kind of subscription - payment for hosting, mobile phone, access to resources, etc. The method is convenient for the user, because the card data is entered by the customer once at the first payment.

The merchant can keep a subscription schedule on its side and initiate subsequent payments through a request to the web service of the IPS Assist system.
